

Together We Can Bring Change.

Spread the Word: Host a House Meeting

In house meetings, volunteers invite neighbors and friends into their homes to talk about building a stronger voice for working families. House meetings help participants connect the dots between policymaking in Washington and its impact here at home. Most importantly, house meetings empower people to make a difference through action in their community. Host a house meeting and help organize for a better community.

Take Control: Holding Elected Officials Accountable

Working Families Win volunteers insist our representatives take a stand on the issues that are preventing America's working families from reaching the American Dream: investing in good jobs, choosing working family priorities over funding unpopular foreign wars, protecting Social Security, making trade agreements fair for everyone, and providing quality health care and access to all.

Hit the Streets: Voter Education

Help voters in your community understand where the candidates stand on our issues. By talking to voters on their doorsteps and in their living rooms, you are making this election about real issues - issues that affect your neighbors and community every day.

Working Families Win is a project of Americans for Democratic Action
1625 K Street, NW, #102, Washington, DC 20006

www.wfwin.org

American Priorities For Working Families

American Priorities for Working Families

A national organizing project of Working Families Win (WFW) and
Americans for Democratic Action (ADA)

The voices of working families are too often overshadowed by the handpicked representatives of corporations and extremists in Congress and in opinions driven news. This tragic reality has resulted in numerous policy defeats and has redirected American priorities away from rational and moral progressive values.

It now has become more important to balance the budget than to create jobs, more important to create competition for business than to protect Main Street from Wall Street abuses, more important to cut successful programs like Medicare and Social Security than to reduce military spending, more important to cut public service jobs like teachers and fire fighters than to provide retirement security and wages through strong labor unions.

Whether it be on recent policy proposals (Economic Recovery, Healthcare or Tax Reform) or in recent elections the clear consensus is that working families will continue to suffer dramatic setbacks if we cannot find our voice and use it to impact our future through rational public policy.

Who We Are...

Working Families Win is a non-profit and non-partisan organization working to change public policy in favor of working families. We organize communities through neighbor-to-neighbor meetings. We help people connect the dots between what happens in Washington and on Wall Street and how it impacts the future of working families at home.

Conservative Extremists and their Wall Street Allies Have Put Working Families in Peril.

- ✓ Over one in six Americans are out of the full time jobs they want.
- ✓ Millions of jobs have been lost overseas to unfair trade agreements.
- ✓ Good jobs have left our communities and have been replaced by lower wage jobs, often without benefits.
- ✓ Daily living costs are skyrocketing, yet wages for most workers are stagnant at best.
- ✓ Just as Americans are seeing the benefits of new health care laws, extremists want to repeal those laws.
- ✓ Spending $10-$12 Billion per month on war while cutting vital services and jobs at home.
- ✓ The basics of the American Dream are becoming luxuries for the fortunate few.

We Need Your Help.

Join us and help working families win!

The Conservative Extremists and Wall Street have turned a deaf ear to the crisis facing working families. Escalating healthcare, unaffordable college tuition, surging unemployment rates, uncontrollable energy costs, and tax payer hand outs for Wall Street CEO's.

Together we can change America and help create a democratic society as it should be.